

Growing a Child's Faith By Karen Whiting

It's never too early to teach children about God and weave faith into daily life. Use natural opportunities to share faith. Here are a few ideas to get you started:

- When a child picks up a feather chat about creation and thank God for making birds.
- When your child falls and cries hug them and pray. Thank God for their legs.
- When it's time to leave the house, pray for safety.
- After watching a fun movie, chat about the story and how Jesus used stories too. He like us to have fun.

The following articles are a few that may help you with faith

Have Consistent Family Devotions

Studies show that devotions in the home and praying as a family are the best methods of building lasting faith in children. Choose methods that make family devotions doable.

Encourage Bravery in Boys

Society puts down Christians and men in many ways. We need to celebrate the maleness of sons and encourage them to be courageous and steadfast. Discover how to do that.

Gratitude Celebrations in the Bible

Thanksgiving tends to be more about stuffing ourselves than thanking God. Use the times of gratitude in the Bible to focus on attitudes of gratitude.
